Will Hanna is a veteran trial lawyer with more than 30 years of litigation experience. He represents clients throughout West Virginia in a variety of areas, including mass tort and class action litigation, product litigation, trucking accidents and workplace liability. He has successfully taken dozens of cases to verdict as a first-chair lawyer in multiple West Virginia counties and federal courts.

“My clients can expect fearless representation regardless of the severity of the case or the complexity of the jurisdiction.”

Will has experience in a wide range of industries. Known as a stand-out in workplace liability – specifically deliberate intent – he has defended a diverse field of clients from corporate coal operators and trucking companies, automotive and product manufacturers, to individuals and small business owners.

What sets Will apart? “I pay extremely close attention to detail, and I utilize prior experience, particularly in the courtroom. In addition, I have a strong work ethic, and that preparedness translates into a desire to achieve the best result for my clients.”

With his commitment to excellence, hands-on approach and approachable style, clients rely on Will to resolve their litigation issues.

“Listening is one of my strong suits. I pride myself on providing personal, caring representation and being available to my clients whenever they need me.”
